Urgent Product Alert

Please advise your customer base of the following notifications from General Motors regarding the body mount bolts on Chevy trucks

2011 GMC Sierra & Chevy Silverado Cab Mount Bolts

When installing tube steps or running boards requiring the loosening of cab mounting bolts, DO NOT use an impact wrench to un-tighten bolts! Always loosen them by hand or you will most likely break the nuts loose from inside the body. GM uses HD Loc-Tite type product that causes the weld nut to break loose and spin inside the body when an impact gun is used to loosen the bolts.

GM also states that anytime you work on stainless fasteners and use an impact gun, it could cause the nut to seize to the bolt. They highly recommend that you always use an anti-seize product when working on vehicles with stainless nuts and bolts.

Dee Zee takes pride in offering easy to install products that customize any vehicle. We will attempt to inform the end consumer before installing their new product. The above warning notification will be included to all Dee Zee product instruction sheets for related applications moving forward.

Thank you for sharing this warning with your customers to give them the tools to provide the best service possible.
